

Special Summer Meeting!

Cave To Cooktop with national Speaker Judith A. Neary, CMKBD

Ever wonder about why the sink is located under the window? Where was the first garbage disposal? Why a stove is called a stove?

This one hour presentation is a brief journey through our human history and how patterns in our culture affect how we function in our homes today and how we will use them in the future. Along the journey we will look at some fun and interesting facts about the evolution of appliances and how we use them today.

Judith A. Neary, CMKBD began her career in commercial and hospitality design and has continued to develop her skills and style designing and building custom cabinetry, case goods and furniture. After twelve years of merchandising and training for a national retailer, she began working in the manufacturing segment of the industry. In addition to showroom space planning and design, her responsibilities have included development and implementation of business processes and installation programs. She brings passion for the Kitchen and Bath Industry, desire to help people achieve, a personal commitment to make a difference and the determination to have fun doing it. Judith is a professional instructor for the NKBA and was a featured guest speaker for Jenn-Air at KBIS 2010 in Chicago. She provides consulting services to members of the industry and is an officer for the Puget Sound chapter of the NKBA.
